Users are shown only the latest update to the story, not the whole thing.

Once a user has added to a story, they cannot add to it again.

When creating a new story, title and text to start.

Logged in users will be able to read any story they have contributed to on their homepage (the landing page after login).

Components: Log in components:

- Authentication and Logout,
- Registration,

Story components:

- Create a story,
- Add to a story,
- View a story,

Explanation of how each component relates to the others.

- Authentication is required to create or add to a story.
- Registration provides possible combinations to be used for login.
- Logout restricts access to story components.
- Create a story stores a new set of data that can be added on to and viewed.
- Adding more to a story changes what viewing the story will look like; showing result.

Login Page - Requests for a username and password.

Homepage - After login, the homepage or landing page will list all the available stories, an option to create a story and add to existing stories. Ideally, the add to story button will no longer work or will disappear after one addition to a specific story.

After adding to or creating a story, there will be an emphasis on those stories they've contributed to on their homepage.
